

Mancunians Prolong the Party, Eat Ethically and Consult on Careers in 08

Trends for 2008 and January behaviour revealed in touchlocal.com Index

Detox, quitting smoking and gym memberships traditionally chime with the start of a New Year. However, an audit of online searches and recommendations on touchlocal.com, the UK's fastest growing local business search and social practical networking website, has revealed that these activities have totalled a meagre 0.35% of national lifestyle searches in the first two weeks of 2008.

Instead, fun-loving Mancunians have shunned the January blues and kept the party season going with food and drink accounting for over 30% of local lifestyle reviews and recommendations searches in the first two weeks of 2008. This focus on takeaways, restaurants and pubs, may well have led to the second interesting trend in Manchester; job-hunting, with 1 in 10 looking online for recommended recruitment agents, jobs and careers since the New Year.

The touchlocal.com Index also reveals the following exciting national trends which look set to emerge in 2008. From a new national dish to trends within charity, 2008 starts here:

- From Vindaloo to Bolognese – no more is Vindaloo the undisputed national dish of Britain. Italian cuisine has replaced the hot favourite as the nation's number one restaurant choice. The number of unique users searching for Italian restaurants totalled 13.0% to pip Indian (11.6%) and Chinese (11.2%) into the runner-up spots. Even in the takeaway stakes Indian fare plummeted with Chinese takeaways claiming 34.0% of searches.
touchlocal.com prediction: a move away from established cuisine to more adventurous tastes in line with international travelling habits, as we are already noticing new searches for Colombian, Nepalese and African cuisine. A secondary trend is for Polish and Eastern European restaurants in line with migration patterns.
- Ethically-sourced food – following the impact of the Channel 4 programme Hugh's Chicken Run, touchlocal.com has identified a wider trend for ethically-sourced food produce. Since the show aired, the category of "Organic Food" has recorded a 92% increase in unique user searches, with categories including local delivery, retailers and wholesalers. touchlocal.com is now encouraging all food retailers and grocers on the site to explicitly reference their ethical credentials to aid their customers' choices.
touchlocal.com prediction: consumers looking for not just organically produced food in 2008, but also for ethical food packaging.
- Hypnotherapy – trend-setter Lily Allen has already used the treatment to drop two dress sizes and is now employing it in an attempt to beat smoking. This type of celebrity endorsement has prompted a new search category with over an 80% increase in searches for hypnotherapy since the New Year.
touchlocal.com prediction: an increased uptake of alternative therapies hitting the mainstream. This could be down to reviews on sites that allow nervous users to access real-life testimonials and recommendations. touchlocal.com's 'Circles' of recommendation allows users to take reassurance from local people's experiences and inspire them to try something new.
- Charity begins at home – local and community-focused charities have enjoyed a major focus in the first two weeks of the year, receiving a 34% rise in unique user searches on touchlocal.com. This could be a move to balance recent high-profile international charity campaigns, such as Live8 with supporting home-grown charities.

Tamer Ozmen, CEO of touchlocal.com, commented "many people now go online as a first port of call for making a change in their life or when looking for inspiration. So, by assessing search terms and recommendations posted by the touchlocal.com community we are able to quickly identify upcoming behavioural trends. The consumer feedback provided by members of touchlocal.com provides a level of reassurance via a virtual community which can make the choices seem far less daunting."

The statistics have come from the first touchlocal.com Index, a report of localised searches and recommendations from the UK's first locality and necessity-based business search and social networking website. The report investigates a variety of key areas, including Social Responsibility, Family, Lifestyle, Relationships and Health & Wellbeing.
